PHOENIX, JULY 27, 1898.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

We invite attention to the advertising columns of the Arizona Republican. Although it is mid-summer this newspaper is carrying more advertising than ever before in its history. Every enterprising firm in Phoenix is represented in its pages and many outside interests that know how to do business properly also offer their announcements. It is a tribute to this newspaper that so many local firms have accepted its statement that persistent advertising brings results. The Republican is read in every portion of Arizona every day in the year. It is delivered by carrier in Prescott, in Mesa, in Tempe and in all the country contiguous to Phoenix. It is emphatically "the people's paper." Advertisers have discovered this, and naturally they patronize it. The Republican has no dull season.

Uncle Sam is doing the only rushing business in summer boarders this season.

The willingness of Santiago shopkeepers to accept American money is a touching condescension.

The clam diggers of Little Neck, Long Island, threaten to form a trust. The great difficulty which confronts them is the fact that most Little Neck clams do not come from that place.

Ex-Queen Lil must abandon all hope of a restoration of her crown, but she can congratulate herself that she is still a sovereign—one of the sovereign people of this spreading republic!

In congratulating the country on the appointment of southern men to the army, Mr. Bryan does not refer to the fact that President McKinley is under obligations to the south for several votes last election.

Cervera has behaved himself like a gentleman, and he ought therefore to be treated like one. But there is no excuse for trying to convey the impression that the American public is much obliged to him.

The conviction of a burglar at Dallas, Texas, within twenty-four hours after he committed the crime, is the kind of administration of justice that will soon deprive Judge Lynch of business, if it should become general.

The new record breaking Japanese cruiser built in America will also aid in the extension of American commercial interests in the east. Business orders will always follow notable achievements by American built cruisers.

It is said that thirteen women have been convicted of murder in New York since 1880, but none have been executed. Curiously enough it is the thirteenth upon whom it is thought the death penalty will be inflicted. No danger in number 13?

Envy—Pain, grief or annoyance felt at the happiness, success or fortune of another; displeasure or grief aroused by the superiority of another, accompanied with a certain degree of malice, or malignity or hatred, and a desire to depreciate or depress the person envied; a repining, at the good or prosperity of another.

That is the definition of the word "envy" given by the Universal dictionary, the very latest authority. It appears to us to have a direct application to the following paragraph which appeared yesterday in the Arizona Gazette: "The Republican announces that it is digging a pit for the foundation of its new perfecting press. In after years the present owners of the paper will be able to gaze mournfully at the excavation and say: 'Here is the hole in which I sunk my money.'"

JUST FOR EDUCATION.

We incline to the opinion that it would be a good thing for Arizona if a sum could be made available for the purpose of sending certain territorial editors out into the world for a time so that they might brush up their ideas and get in touch with the sentiment of the country. There's the Globe Silver Belt, the Arizona Bulletin, the Prescott Courier, the Arizona Gazette, the Bisbee Orb and a few others that we might mention. They do not recognize the fact, so patent to the masses, that a change has come over the country. While the country at large is discussing new and absorbing issues these so-called moulders of Arizona thought continue to teach the doctrines of Johann Most, Eugene Debs, Emma Goldman, Billy Boy Bryan, and that class of dead and gone theorists and anarchists. It is idle to assume that these newspapers, let alone, will see the folly of their course. The frequency of such expressions as "equal rights to all," "the common people" (Prescott Courier's favorite), "the down-trodden masses," "sixteen to one" and "down with the monopolists" in their columns attest to the hold the Debs-Bryan frenzy has upon them. In the interest of the readers of these journals who naturally are influenced by their utterances, and who clearly are being imposed upon, the legislature, we are quite sure, would be justified in appropriating a sum sufficient to send the editors of these papers to Chicago, New York, Washington and other centers of civilization for the purpose of correcting their habits of thought and expression. Of course it would not do to permit them to go unattended. Men who have displayed such shocking ignorance of the trend of public sentiment could hardly be expected to reap the full benefit of such an excursion if permitted to follow their own devices. Too many "skin games" have come into vogue since these editors began to talk about "the common people" and "plutocrats of Wall street" to warrant sending them alone. Of course they would be "on" to the games of a generation ago, but these are not worked to any extent now, and in seeking to avoid them there is no telling what harm might result to these thought moulders. The legislature might conclude to send Mr. Tom Farish or some other reformer as an escort. So long as he was thoroughly posted and equal to the task of putting the editors in close communication with the country and its thought it would not matter who might be selected. It is a pity that the legislature will not meet until next winter, for this missionary work ought not to be postponed, but as it would be impossible to raise sufficient money by subscription to send these editors on what would probably be termed by the unthinking a junketing trip, there appears to be no chance of accomplishing this worthy object except through the legislature. We submit the question to the people of Arizona who love the territory and who dislike to have the impression get abroad, by means of the papers in question, that Arizona's leading men are thieves, that its people generally are under the heels of conscienceless money sharks, and that it should be shunned by all respectable homeseekers. Agitation of the question now and during the campaign ought to give us a legislature that would willingly enter into the spirit of this desirable missionary movement.

THE AMERICAN SOLDIER.

One of the surprises of the war thus far has been the admirable courage and endurance of the men from the cities who entered the army as volunteers. To those who remember the civil war this should occasion no surprise. The "counter jumpers," as they were then called, soon proved that they were the equals of the foresters from Maine and Michigan, the farmers from the west, and the rough and ready fellows from the plains. In course of time, however, the men all became equals in efficiency. The surprise of today is the fact that what are known as "society men"—looked upon as namby-pamby fellows because they dress well, part their hair in the middle, play golf and tennis and hang around club houses—have turned out in force and cast their lot with the daring spirits of the west. Not only that, but these idlers and these dainty youths have shown that they can stand the rigors of war without a murmur and can fight as vigorously and as efficiently as any other set of men.

The Rough Riders, for instance, are commanded by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, a man of wealth enough to live without work, but who is always busy, and behind him is a goodly sprinkling of men of the same character. Colonel Roosevelt is the pride and admiration of his fellows, who think no less of him because he is educated and a capable man of affairs. It is thus interesting to note that Major Brodie of the Rough Riders, now in New York as the result of an arm punctured by a Mauser bullet at Santiago, has to say:

Our victories thus far have been won by the enlisted men, and of these there are no finer examples in any army in the world than in the Rough Riders. The papers and the people have called us "Teddy's Terrors;" they have said we were a wild, untamed lot of chaps, all in the most good natured spirit. Some of the men in the regiment are rough men, coming from a rough country. In Arizona and Oklahoma, you know men do not always dress for dinner; but they make staunch friends, they are brave men, and their aim is as true as their hearts. When we of the west heard that our comrades in the regiment from the east were the heroes at home of tennis courts, golf links, and drawing rooms, some of us were inclined to wonder a little what use such fellows would be in fighting Spaniards in a climate which was supposed to be more deadly than bullets. Perhaps your New York boys had some misgivings about us. We didn't know your contribution to the regiment then, and they didn't know us. We got acquainted at San Antonio, and our friendship was cemented with lead at Las Guasimas.

The western contingent has learned to know that gentle ways and polished manners are only the eastern veneer of a courage as splendid as was ever shown on western plains. And your boys have learned that, while we of the west may not all be Chesterfields, neither are we unlettered peasants, and in the regiment today everybody is just a soldier and in the blue and yellow, in camp or on the field, at mess or in the trenches, you couldn't say which of us came from New York and which from Arizona.

One effect of the creation of the unique body known as Rough Riders will be to bring about a better understanding between men whose lines have led in entirely different directions. The antipathies of the men of one section for the men of other sections and of other conditions in life are being rapidly removed by the bringing together of soldiers from all parts of the country. The men from the plains and from the south are discovering that the man who takes a bath every day, who uses perfume on his handkerchief, who wears golf suits, and all that sort of thing, is a man after all. The men who do these things are also learning to understand that their brothers who are not all of them given to "society" practices are true bloods all the same and not to be ignored in the consideration of the general scope of American citizenship. This blending of all sorts and conditions of Americans is doing much to unite the whole country as one class—American citizens.

The Spanish people have begun to realize that a wounded honor is sometimes less annoying than an empty stomach.

Richard Croker disapproves of racing methods in Great Britain. Mr. Croker has been so used to running the game to suit himself that he may have become hard to please.

GLOBE SIGHTS.

[From the Atchison Globe.] There are too many people who use their friends as coaling stations. A woman's idea of a glorious death is to leave her money to a church.

We greatly admire a man who has sense enough not to be a thoroughbred. It will do you no good to complain: the neighbors won't mind their own business.

A mule has one advantage: even one is afraid of a mule, and no one "jokes" with him.

People put a terrible lot of money and work in a home which they help to make unhappy.

Linen pants are always too long or too short; no man ever wore a pair just right as to length.

The police should be given some power to arrest any idler who practices with the doors open.

When a man's wife falls heir to money, all the other married men around town feel mighty funny.

Half the men you see sitting on the porch with their families in the evening, are being reminded that the grass needs cutting.

As people get along in years, the recollection of the price paid remains with them longer than the recollection of the good time.

When a man refuses to sign a note as security he says he would like to, but that he has promised his wife never to sign another security note.

We have noticed with regret that there is no demand for a great many things the people have to sell. For example, in the spring there is no demand for radishes. The fact is unfortunate, for radishes are easily raised, and people could make money selling them, provided the demand was brisk, and prices fairly remunerative. But there is a brisk demand for at least one article: ham bones. Keepers of restaurants say that they have twenty calls for ham bones where they have one to sell. A ham bone sells for five cents, and colored people are particularly fond of them.

GAVE HIM A JEWELED GARTER.

A Kansas recruit has sent the following letter to a friend at home: At Trinidad, Colo., about 2,000 people met us at the depot with a band, and gave us plenty to eat and supplied us with tobacco, matches and candy. Some of the girls along the route gave away flowers on their hats and other articles as souvenirs.

"I secured something from a black-eyed fairy, with a streak of devil in her make-up, which I prize next to the greyhound. The train started to pull out of the station and I and the rest of the boys had our heads out of the windows and our hands outstretched, when this girl ran forward, placed something in my hand, and dodged back into the crowd.

"I drew back and examined my trophy—it was a jeweled garter. The boys wrestled me for it, but I have it to date."

A venerable old lady, whose home is in St. Louis, relates: "Some time ago I started to use at the suggestion of my son, who advised me to try them. I take one Tabule after each meal, and can now look forward to meal-time with a pleasure which I have not experienced for years. The headaches that constantly harassed me in the past, and the accumulation of gases upon my stomach, have disappeared, and these improvements I attribute to Ripans Tabules. For more than twelve years I suffered from indigestion and nervous dyspepsia. I suffered intensely during that time, and spent large sums of money in the employment of St. Louis' most prominent physicians, but the relief afforded was only temporary. I had begun to give up all thoughts of ever being permanently cured, but now my only regret is that a knowledge of Ripans Tabules came to me so late in life."

RIP-AN-S TABULES
